Artistic Director's Note

This note is a little personal. Our Co-Artistic Director and friend John Sloan is stepping down from the position this month, so we want to pay him a little tribute. But like all things Antaeus, first a little history...

In 1991, Antaeus' founders, Dakin Matthews and Lillian Garrett-Groag, pulled together the best classically trained actors in Los Angeles, creating the foundation that gives the Company its identity to this day.

After years of skillful leadership by both John Apicella and Jeanie Hackett, in 2011 the company decided on a unique three-person leadership structure, our "Triumverate." John Sloan, Rob Nagle and Tony Amendola were recruited and the first production under their watch, Peace in Our Time, remains one of the Company's biggest hits. After fulfilling his original six-month commitment, Tony opted to step down and I joined the team. Since then the three of us – Rob, John and I – have had the privilege of overseeing numerous full seasons of productions, the growth of our Academy and Arts Education programs, a capital campaign and the move to our beautiful new home.

It's been a unique working relationship, remarkable in how drama-free it's been. From the beginning we've been unified in the direction we've wanted to see Antaeus go. We've attempted to honor our past, while moving forward into a future which faces many challenges unforeseeable back in 1991.

And so very many of our successes are directly attributable to John Sloan. He's a man with vision and a great ability to see the big picture. He's a fierce champion of artists – actors, directors, designers, writers. His love of our Playwrights Lab has helped that program achieve its current success. And his remarkable eye and commitment to excellence have improved every aspect of our work. It's hard to imagine going on without him, but his influence will be felt in the rest of this season and well beyond.

Antaeus has always prided itself on the depth of talent on our bench. And that goes for leadership as well as for acting talent. We're proud to announce that long time Associate Artistic Director Kitty Swink will be joining Rob and I as we continue the Triumvirate experiment. Kitty has worked tirelessly as chair of our Development Committee and few people understand the ins and outs of the organization the way she does. Her intelligence, taste and passion make her an excellent choice to become a member of the team.

Rob joins me in welcoming Kitty as Co-Artistic Director and in thanking John Sloan from the bottom of our hearts for his years of incredible dedication and service.

Onward!

Bill Brochtrup
Co-Artistic Director

I am so proud to have served alongside Bill and Rob as Co-Artistic Director of Antaeus for the last six years. It has been the experience of a lifetime and I'm grateful to the entire Company and Board for the opportunity – thank you all from the bottom of my heart.

I've had the privilege of meeting and working closely with so many generous and talented artists; I cherish those relationships and I've learned so much from our collaborations. It is a bittersweet feeling, stepping aside from a role that has meant so much to me and at a such an exciting time for Antaeus, but I'm thrilled by the prospect of all the magnificent theater to come from this one-of-a-kind company. As usual, Tennessee Williams said it best: "The world is violent and mercurial – it will have its way with you. We are saved only by love – love for each other and the love we pour into the art we feel compelled to share: being a parent, being a writer; being a painter; being a friend. We live in a perpetually burning building, and what we must save from it, all the time, is love."

John Sloan
Co-Artistic Director

Director's Note

I would prefer if you waited until after you see The Hothouse before (and if) you read this, because I believe seeing it with no expectations will enhance your experience. The play, we hope, will speak for itself and I don't want to prejudice or influence your response to it. But for those of you who like something to think about as you watch, I offer you the following:

Pinter wrote this play in 1958 and put it away without production until 1979, when he re-discovered it, made a few changes and directed the first production himself. Since then, it has been produced off and on, and to wonderful reception, but it remains somewhat unknown to theater-goers. That seemed reason enough to share it with you. But it also seems the perfect play for our times. We watch as a despotic, increasingly addled, ineffectual leader gets through his day. One of his tactics is to divide and conquer, and in response, those around him scheme and scramble to maintain their footing or move up the ladder. Amazingly, Pinter accomplishes all of this with a relentless barrage of farcical, almost vaudevillian humor. If we get it right, you will laugh a lot.

The play also showcases what I like to think actors at Antaeus excel in: language, style and daring. I hope if you like the play, you will return and see the other half of this amazing company. I believe that double casting has made us better, more humble actors, resulting in more detailed and personal performances. It's impossible to copy someone when you partner; you can only learn, be inspired and inspire yourself. Each actor builds a unique interpretation of the role. A second viewing will reveal not merely new insights into Pinter's extraordinary writing, but also the power of an actor's imprint.
